

IS IT OKAY TO SUPPORT TERRORISM
IF IT'S only
A LITTLE BIT?

So you buy a gallon occasionally.

It's not like you're paying millions of dollars to finance an oil cartel and all the death and destruction it creates.

And you understand the argument: That oil money contributes to terrible things.

That if you buy gas, your money goes to people who are responsible for murder, bribery, intimidation and torture. That if you stopped buying gas, the dealers would go away, the violence would end.

You get all that.

But it's just a gallon, right?

Well, here's a secret: You don't pick which side you're on by how much you buy.

You pick which side you're on by buying in the first place.
